Geax Tires - Sea Otter 2010

by Tyler Maine
May 1, 2010

Geax have been around for a while now, but only in the past 2 years have they really gained some traction in our market place it seems. They have been working on tires that bridge the gaps in marketplaces like XC to Slopestyle with their very popular AKA. With riders like Cam Zink, Luke Fulton, Casey Groves and others all helping to reshape and develop the brand into something that they need from their tires as riders, you can expect more riders to follow suit soon. We caught up to Ryan at Geax and he was able to tell us a bit about the all new AKA, the strong running Saguaro and one of their originals, the Sturdy.

they are nice except they are a lot more difficult then (let's say) maxxis tires as far as getting them to seat properly in your rim!

i'm running Sturdy 2.25 UST - fits great on the rim, runs very fast, even faster than Spesh Eskar... but grip could be much better in wet, thou mine is not dual compound
- looking at Saguaro 2.2 TNT as my new rear summer tyre

I was bugging the dude pictured above because I run the Neuron in the front and I wanted a Geax in the rear too. He told me this tire was Geax's response to the small block 8 so I'll end up giving it a try.

man - I actually run a Neuron up front with an AKA at the back (check the pics of my Giant AC in my profile). The hook-up of the AKA is AWESOME! grips when you need it to, but not so much that it slows the back end down; it's a VERY responsive tire and I love the combo with a Neuron. To any "Kenda devotees" out there who love the Nevegal/SB8 combo, I challenge you to try the Neuron/AKA combo - you'll love it!

I second that. I ran a 2.3 Neuron, with a 2.2 AKA in the back, and it was one of the best tires combos I've ever had on my DH bike. I'm a little bugged that they don't have a dual ply sidewall for the AKA, but I'll live.

 Wow. The AKA and SAGAURO look like some fast rolling and reasonably grippy XC Tires! Im on the look out for some new rubber, they're definatly something im putting on the shopping list! Are all these products available now? Im gonna check they're site out.

 Suguaro is a killer summer hardpack tire that handles even rocky terrain pretty well. Very fast tire. Best 29er front tire I've used to date.

 the aka wears down too quickly for my liking. been running one on the back of my shova for about half of summer(3 months). Already has 2 plugs in it and no knobs left on the center line. But it sure is/was grippy for a cross country tire. Lacks some decent side ramp knobs thou :/

 I want a pair of aka tires but I'm genna keep my maxxix for as long as I can. Sam reynolds was running geax aka tires last time I checked as well, so they can't be half bad.

 they look like pretty intersting tyres. The aka is going to have to be amazing to get me away from a kenda small block 8 in the summer months

 Really liking these guys tires , ive been pounding on my Tattoo lights and they are holding up well. Curious to try their freeride offerings once my Maxxis set wears out.

 jcinkits (6 hours ago) + 1
 well, knowing Maxxis, they should wear out in about 5 minutes of shredding so get yer $$$ out...

 That's a wicked flick by Geax,i use their Tattoo 2.3 FR slick,and i've been using them for over a year for street use,not dirt work,but there are perfect for dirt too.And without too much exageration they're still as good as new.
 This is a tyre company,coming on strong,ready or not.And good luck to them,cos they are deffo the real deal,and so is this flick,why are there only 30 something comments.????????!!!!

 I used a Lobo Mas Loco for a while and I thought it was very very good, great grip on rocks, hooked up well on the corners until finally gradually letting go into a nice drift - very similar to Super Tacky High Rollers. And the white sidewalls got lots of attention if you are into that sort of thing.
